

John Armor

John Armor graduated from Yale University in 1964 and Maryland Law School in 1970, with assorted honors both places. He has finished course work for a PhD in Public Policy at American University, but must still do his dissertation. He has published seven books and over 750 articles to date. He also practiced in the US Supreme Court for 33 years.

He has four children and eight grandchildren. He has served in a number of local and national charities, including on the Board of the American Leukemia Society. He lives in a restored, turn-of-the-century farmhouse in Macon County with his fiancée, Michelle Mead, and two superlative cats.
